

ARMANDO DIAZ

Facility Management Group Founder

BIO

Mr. Armando Diaz began his professional career in 1988 in the transportation industry. Starting out on the loading dock he moved through the ranks to become an operations supervisor. As an operations supervisor he was responsible for training the dock crew on various safety and production aspects of the company. It was the “safety aspects” of training that he found to be invigorating and so, began to study the DOT/OSHA regulations as well as the hazardous materials transportation code.

Shortly after the 2001 attack on New York, he experienced a layoff, due in part to the shutdown of the transportation industry. He had to reinvent himself and decided to enroll in college and become a certified safety trainer. It was at the University of California at San Diego where his skills from the transportation industry were honed and he evolved into an Occupational Safety and Health Professional. He now specializes in the OSHA state and federal safety codes and founded the Facility Management Group in 2006.
